McGILL AND LOYOLA WILL CLASH AGAIN

Red and White Will Face Last Year's Champions.

GAMES AT VICTORIA RINK.

Laval and National Will Try Conclusions, While Shamrocks Meet Vickers.

McGill and Loyola are scheduled to clash to-night at 8.00 o'clock, at the Victoria Rink, in the City League series. This game was originally scheduled for last Thursday evening at the Arena, but the disastrous fire which left the big rink a heap of ruins, has necessitated a change in the schedule.

This will be the first time in this year's League games that McGill and the Loyola boys have come together, though the Red and White had little difficulty in gaining a decision over Loyola in an exhibition game at the first of the season. The game to-night will, however, be a hard-fought contest, as the champions of last year are still going strong, and can be counted upon to put up a stiff argument. Loyola has the advantage of having played several games in connection with a trip to the States, and should be in excellent working condition. They have also the advantage over McGill in that the University men suffered the loss of their skates in the Arena fire, and will therefore be obliged to play with new outfits. McGill, on the other hand, rendered confident, since their former victory over Loyola, are looking forward to carrying off the honours to-night. The Red and White has been practicing hard, and should take the ice in perfect condition.

Between 9 and 10 Laval will meet National, and this should prove an interesting contest, as both teams are strong and fast, and can be relied upon to put up a big fight. The clash between Shamrocks and Vickers will also be worth seeing, for though the Irishmen are by far the lighter, they are fast, and will keep the muck-makers on the qui vive.

The following are the line-ups for the different teams:

SWIMMING CLASS TO BE STARTED

Seniors to be Given First Opportunity to Learn Popular Sport.

There will be a gymnasium period for the regular class on Thursday, or this week, at 5.15 o'clock sharp.

A learner's swimming class will be started in the course of a few days, and as it is not satisfactory to have more than six in such a class, the Physical Committee has decided to first call for names of any senior undergraduates who desire to learn swimming. Each year will be taken in turn, and six lessons ought to place a student in a position to become efficient, in this important branch of one's physical fitness, with a little practice. Will any Senior who desires to take advantage of this short course kindly hand in his name, and if possible 'phone number, at the Office of the McGill Union, or communicate direct with your Physical Director, A. L. Walsh, at W. 3625.

Any student in Fourth Year in Science and Arts, and Fourth and Fifth years in Medicine, will be welcome in this class, and the first six names handed in will be accepted. The Crawl and Breast strokes will be taught, as well as elementary diving.

C. O. T. C. PARADED ON CAMPUS SATURDAY.

There was a Battalion parade of the C.O.T.C. on the Campus on Saturday afternoon. This was the first parade since the holidays. After marching to the Molson Hall to get rifles, the men went back to the Campus and spent the afternoon in company and platoon drill. The weather was mild, and the time seemed to go fairly fast.

When the men had fallen in for the half-time period, one of the C. O. T. C. sergeant-instructors took over "A" Company and drilled the company in a creditable manner. Then the student N.C.O.'s took over their respective platoons for the first time, and put the men through rifle exercises, extended order and platoon drill.

The turn-out was very poor, for there were less than four hundred men on parade. As there will only be a couple more parades for the year, it is hoped that the attendance will be better, so as to make the last parades successful.

McGILL MAN WANTED.

Dr. J. Hinson West (Med. '15), who has spent the last two years at Harrington, Canadian Labrador, working for Dr. Grenfell, is leaving next spring for India. The Labrador Medical Mission would like, if possible, to secure a McGill man to succeed him. Anyone wishing to make inquiries in regard to this most interesting work should see Dr. Grenfell when he comes to Montreal in February, or apply to Miss Roddick, Mackay St.

ANNUAL PHOTO-GRAPHS.

Are you one of the twenty-five Juniors who have failed to get your photograph taken at Gordon's Studio for the Annual? Your promptness in this matter will assist the Board to make the Annual what you want.

Or are you one of those who have had your picture taken and have not returned your proofs to Gordon's? This is your opportunity to exercise your taste on behalf of the Annual. Why not do it?

Executives of all clubs and classes are urged to see that their photographs are in the hands of some member of the Board before January 15.

A write-up for each of the societies is required as well.

CAPT. LALANNE FORMER DAILY EDITOR BACK

Young Officer Has Received
Rapid Promotion at Front.

GEO. BOURKE

Speaks of Other McGill Men On Active Service.

Another McGill man, this time a former Daily editor, has returned from France, and as might have been expected, has particularly distinguished himself at the front. Capt. James Lalanne, M.C., was a member of Arts '17, and while at college was an enthusiastic member of the C.O.T.C. He held a sergeant's stripes while in the Battalion, but enlisted for overseas service as a private in the Second Universities Company. Before leaving Canada, however, he was granted his corporal's stripes.

It was with the greatest difficulty that any information whatever was received, and the Daily experts were taxed to their utmost. In fact, we must admit that most of our information comes from other than personal sources.

It was at the Passchendaele fight, which took place on October 30th last, that Capt. Lalanne received the wound which sent him back to Canada to recuperate. Besides being wounded he suffered from the effects of gas. He was out on a reconnaissance, very near to the German trenches, when he was hit.

Lieut. J. J. Harold, Arts '16, and Terry Hall, Sci. '17, were in the same company with him at the time. The former was also wounded, while Hall was killed. Capt. Lalanne won his Military Cross while on dangerous scouting duty. He is now with the 5th Mounted Rifles.

While overseas he met many other McGill men, including Geo. Bourke and T. W. L. McDermott. Geo. Bourke is now sergeant-major of the McGill Siege Artillery Draft, which left Canada last spring. McDermott enlisted as a gunner in the original McGill Battery with Captain Cyrus MacMillan.

Captain Lalanne eulogizes the work of L. C. Montgomery, who also received the Military Cross a short time ago.

Besides being wounded at Passchendaele, he was wounded at the Somme after being in action for not more than five minutes, and has taken part in most of the battles which were fought during his stay in France.

ARTS '18 MAN IN SWITZERLAND.

Pte. Spencer R. Symonds, Arts '18, is officially reported transferred to Switzerland, for repatriation. Pte. Symonds enlisted in the First Universities Company soon after the outbreak of the war, and was taken prisoner at the battle of Sanctuary Wood, in 1916, having remained in German hands since. While at McGill he was a prominent member of Arts '18, and was a member of the staff of McGill Daily.

YALE LAYS DOWN AGAIN TO PITTSBURGH.

PITTSBURGH, Pa. — In a very interesting and hard-fought game the University of Pittsburgh varsity basketball team defeated the Yale varsity here on Tuesday evening by a score of 39 to 33. It was the second defeat that Yale five had met with in this city, Carnegie Technology having won from the Ells on Monday evening 35 to 32.

Yale fought hard battles in both contests, but the Blue lacked in team work, which is not surprising considering the fact that the Ell players are working together for the first season, all the veterans of the 1917 team now being in war work. But for the splendid individual work of Van Slyck and Shedd, the two Ell forwards, the Blue would have lost both games by a much wider margin.

THE WAY TO BE RIGHT.

The way to be right is to want to be right.
And it's never a secret to know
The path to the high and the true
And the right,
Or the way that the righteous
should go.

For there is the sun of the bright-
burning day,
The road is all marked for the feet
Of those who would follow the wonderful way,
That is built for the wise and the sweet.

The way to be true is to want to be true,
And the rest of it comes as a part Of the essence of life that is centred
in you,
And is deep in the cells of your heart.

TURN OUT TO-NIGHT!

As stated in another column of to-day's Daily, the senior hockey team will to-night meet Loyola in what must prove a highly exciting and important match. The play of the Red and White team, to judge from the first games of the season, will be of the very highest class; the men will no doubt put their whole energy into the contest; the question as to whether they will win or not will almost certainly be decided by the kind of support they will receive from the students of the college they represent.

If, as in the case of so many similar games in past years, a mere handful of "rooters" is on hand to cheer the team on, and these are overwhelmingly outnumbered by the supporters of the opposing team, the hockey players who are giving their best efforts towards landing the championship for McGill will have every reason, in the event of a defeat, to blame the students for their ill-success. In the vast majority of such cases, the cause of the disaster is the lack of proper spirit shown by the men who, being unable to help the University to victory by their efforts on the ice, should be only too ready and willing to turn out in support of those who are able to do so.

As is well known to all who have made any attempt to follow the latest events in the world of sports, the team representing McGill has this year suffered from the same ill-luck as inaugurated last season. The loss of their entire outfit in the recent Arena fire was a severe handicap indeed, and is especially to be reckoned in view of the fact that the Loyola men have preserved theirs intact. Nevertheless, we may be sure that the team will be only spurred on by their misfortune to greater efforts.

Were the Red and White line-up of such poor quality as to ensure their ending up the season in last place, the fault of those who refuse them proper support might possibly be condoned, although not excused, for any college team that does its best is worthy of the full support of the undergraduates. But as it is, the McGill men stand the best of chances of carrying off the honours in the City League this year, and so are doubly deserving of the cheers of every man who calls himself an undergraduate of McGill University.

KEEPING IN SHAPE.

Now that the regular C. O. T. C. programme for the present session is practically completed, the question of choosing a suitable occupation for the time we have been spending in military exercises naturally enters into our thoughts. During the past three months the majority of students have been taking very little physical exercise apart from the compulsory military drill, and the tendency is sure to be towards spending the extra time now put on our hands in more lucrative, but less healthy pursuits.

Men who are habitually engaged in mental work as a rule do not take much pleasure in the more strenuous outdoor exercises. Then we hear of soldiers at the front spending their spare time in playing football, while those who spend every day of the week in an office become habitués of the picture shows. We do not wish to express an unfavourable opinion of the theatre. An occasional evening spent at the "movies" does no one any harm, and is a splendid way of diverting our attention from a troublesome problem, and resting a tired brain. The fault lies in allowing this to become our only form of recreation.

Nearly every student will admit the value of spending a few hours a week in physical exercise, yet they are not exceptions to the general rule just given.

Those who are wise will not substitute indoor pleasures for the healthy exercise obtained through a membership in McGill's regiment. For a time skating and hockey will afford recreative opportunities for the student. Later on gymnasium work would no doubt be found most beneficial. But while hockey and gymnasium work are good enough as substitutes, there is no reason why any substitute should be necessary. We understand that an "A" certificate class will be organized by the C. O. T. C. authorities, which will "carry on" for the remainder of the season. No one who is not prepared for hard and serious work should consider joining this class, but for those who possess a love of exercise, combined with a patriotic feeling of military duty, there will be no question about taking advantage of the opportunities offered by the Officers' Training Corps. For those who persevere in this course a lieutenant's certificate will be the just reward of their labour.

R. V. C. NOTES.

The R. V. C. Alumnae Society has arranged for a course of four lectures, the first of which will be delivered to-morrow evening, at 8.15, in the Assembly Hall of the R.V.C. Prof. Stephen Leacock will deliver an address on "Frenzied Fiction." Tickets will be 25c.

On Jan. 22, Dr. C. W. Colby will deliver the second lecture of the series. His subject will be "Thoughts on Present Discontents."

On Feb. 5, Mr. Bernard Walker will give an illustrated lecture on "The U. S. Navy."

On Feb. 19, Mr. A. G. Racey will complete the series with an address entitled "Lest We Forget"—The War in Cartoon.

The proceeds of these lectures are to be in aid of our wounded soldiers.

As a rule very little of the eventful, characterizes the modern railway journey. For most part it is a monotonous humdrum affair, which, as it progresses, develops into torture. How different from some of those good old "tears" we read of. For example, that hair-raising dash with the good news from Ghent to Aix. However, whether or not on account of my exuberance of spirits, stirred by the prospect of a week or so of Christmas cheer and revelry, my recent journey impressed me as really partaking of the nature of the eventful.

The absurd earliness of the train's departure necessitated a premature and hasty exit from a warm bed, followed by a no less hurried attempt at breakfasting. Eventually, after no inconsiderable aimless running hither and thither, we found ourselves upon the station platform, hopelessly submerged beneath a veritable mountain of luggage. An inspection of the various track numbers finally decided us as to the identity of that particular steam driven contraption, which was destined to convey us in an endless series of bumps and jerks to our destination, and to the amiable companionship of the turkey and plum pudding. After no little puffing and blowing, due to our united attempts to overcome the law of gravitation to the extent of raising our multitudinous personal effects to the train platform, we at length found ourselves wedged into a single seat, breathing laboriously and intermittently giving vent to truly pathetic sighs of relief. Having deposited his many burdens, my companion ventured a glance at the other occupants of the car, while I vainly endeavoured to free my foot, which was apparently hopelessly wedged beneath our baggage. Suddenly I heard a smothered exclamation, which sounded like, "Well, I'll be blowed," (of course I was merely a mistake if he hadn't been excited he'd have said, "Well, I'll be blowed"). He always is particular regarding his grammar. Glancing up from the discouraging task of extricating my foot, I enquired, "smatter." "Nothing," he replied in an abstracted manner. Then looking passably intelligent, he suggested that we make enquiries as to whether we were on the right bone-shaker or not. This struck me as a fairly rational suggestion, and I volunteered to obtain the desired assurance. Thereupon, with one last determined yank I jerked my pedal extremely free and hurried out onto the platform.

As is invariably the case, the first class car (i.e., first class, not in the sense of being superior to its less aristocratic predecessors, but merely to be preferred since its occupants are victimized to the extent of a dollar or so more than those who occupied the so-called second class cars), was apparently several miles from the station. After walking a mile, more or less, I encountered one of those distinguished appearing officials who boast those amazing rows of sparkling brass buttons, and who, I have learned, as a rule have more brass than brains. With as complete a show of deference as I could muster, I humbly enquired if it would please him to inform me whether the train, of which he constituted so important, was indispensable a part, would undertake to convey me to C—. With a stolid countenance and an assurance quite in harmony with his brazen vestment decorations he sonorously replied "no," and condescendingly directed me to some other distant waiting monster.

I didn't stop to demand his credentials—as I have vowed not to fail to do in the future—but turned and raced back that mile or so. I found my companion seated amidst our possessions, a placid smile on his face, which, however, gave place to a look of incredulity, disappointment and consternation as I thrust some baggage upon him and dragged him forth.

We both sprinted, stumbled, and

NOTES FROM ALUMNAE NEWS.

K. H. Travis, M.D., is expecting to take up work in China this winter for the Canadian Church Mission.

Anna Mackenzie has gone to Barbados for the winter.

Isabel McCaw is driving a motor transport in Salonika, carrying supplies from one convalescent home to another. Her present address is, On Active Service, Miss Isabel McCaw, No. 78, care Dr. Bennett, Scottish Women's Hospital, Royal Serbian Army, Salonika, Greece.

Marjorie F. Bennetts is a nurse in training at the General Hospital.

sprinted again until at length we again approached our brazen friend, and under his direction hurried to a distant train. Arriving breathless and in no very gracious mood, we were met with the highly comforting information that we had just left the train we wanted, and that the one before us was by no means what we wanted. With a common exclamation of rage and desperation, we turned, and with one accord raced at top speed, overcoming an almost irresistible temptation to "talk to" our official friend of the buttons. Spurred with the knowledge that the train was almost due to leave, we bumped frantically along in the midst of our heavy bags, and suit cases, until at last we drew ourselves, exhausted, onto the platform of our car. Here my companion stopped, blocking the doorway, and with an ashy pallor on his cheek, refused to enter. Struggling for breath, and impatient to get rid of my burdens, I enquired in no gentle tone, "What to the— was wrong with him?" "No, no," he replied in a broken voice, "we—at least I—can't go in there." "What in the deuce is to prevent you?" I exclaimed, commencing to feel wrathful. "Because we've acted like fools, and there are some—girls (mentioning a well known ladies' educational institution) in this car." With an exclamation of disgust and anger, I brushed him aside, and entered, calling to him that I didn't give a red cent who was there. I was going to find a seat. He followed tremblingly. But our seat was gone, so we had to repair to the second class car (remember, second class, not because it was in any way inferior to the first class) for the time being. Finally, installed in a seat amidst our baggage, we spent a half an hour or so thinking dark thoughts and saying uncomplimentary things about railway officials, brass buttons, brass, brains (or lack of brains), and so on, and so forth. Having finally exhausted this topic of conversation, we determined to retrieve our injured fortunes by securing a seat within the aristocratic atmosphere of the first class car. After several vain and humiliating efforts we eventually attained to our hearts' desire, and settling back into the comfortable seat, considered that our trials and tribulations were over.

After a few minutes of silent enjoyment of my re-established fortunes I suddenly remembered the incident at the doorway, and immediately demanded of my companion where those young ladies from the— (naming the well known ladies' educational institution) were. "Sh," he warned in great excitement and alarm. "Right across the aisle." "H'm." The situation began to grow quite interesting. In a moment or two I coolly surveyed our surroundings, and perceiving nothing in any way alarming in the form of neighbours, I fell to watching the landscape as it rushed by.

Some time passed, and then again my notice was attracted by a movement across the aisle. I found that our fair companions had possessed themselves of an infant prodigy from some weary mother a few seats ahead of them, and they were engaged in what seemed to be, from the continuous exclamations of delight, the most agreeable occupation namely of torturing the unhappy youngster. "It must be a good natured thing," delightedly exclaimed one of the collegians. I heartily agreed, and thanked my lucky stars that I was capable of defending myself from such familiarities as the poor little infant had to submit to.

At this juncture I made another surprising and interesting discovery. Suddenly I began to pay attention to a female voice behind me, which frequently rose to a pitch of apparent enthusiasm. After a few moments spent in listening, I deduced sufficient to convince me that the owner of the voice was a prospective school teacher, proceeding home from that notorious shelter of the embryo agriculturist situated on the banks of the St. Lawrence. Even as I listened the train gave a jerk, proceeded hesitatingly, jerked again, and then after a series of nerve racking bumps, came to a dead stop. The conversation in the seat behind me also faltered and died away. There was silence. Then from behind, the female voice, "now we are going to be terribly late." Then silence. The clicking of knitting needles across the aisle next attracted my attention. I was thankful (for the youthful one's sake), that the baby had been returned to its maternal protection. Robbed of the amusement derived from torturing the infant, the two fair ones were evidently at loss for something to while away the moments. One was clicking away regularly with her knitting needles, the other with head bowed on the seat ahead of her, was indulging in some gymnastic brain exercises apparently. I was really impressed with the peacefulness of the scene, and the more so when I for the first time noted the person in the seat ahead of the fair collegians. Was he? Yes he was. A Theological student, and he was studying his sermon for the next day. Ah, the peacefulness of the scene.

Here a series of sharp jerks accompanied with no little groaning, indicated a desire on the part of the train to seek pastures new. This desire soon materialized, and once more we sped along. But the peaceful quiet of the scene had been interrupted. The Theologian closed his book. An elderly lady stopped, on her way through the car, at the seat occupied by the fair collegians. After the usual exchange of greetings had been made the elderly one, whether naturally self-conscious or whether she noted an expression of criticism upon the faces of those she addressed, thought it necessary to inform them that she had been compelled to wash her hair only a day or two ago, and it would not "stay down" or "stay put," or something like that. After numerous personal enquiries she passed on, remarking, as she left, "My, it will be fine for your mother to have you home."

By this time the train had again slackened speed, and indications were decidedly in favour of another long stop. My attention was again attracted to the seat behind me, by the exclamation, in the now familiar tone, "Now we will be terribly late." This stop, however, proved to be short and soon we were again rattled on and on. Mile after mile of dull monotony without a break. And then again a movement across the aisle drew my eyes in that direction. Could it be possible? Alas, yes, they were preparing to leave the train at the next stop. It came all too soon. With a grinding and groaning of brakes, quite in harmony with my spirit of dejection, the train pulled up, and "they" got off.

As the train drew away I lost interest in the remaining surroundings, and spent the rest of the journey in the usual monotonous occupations characteristic of railway travel.

However, though this latter part of the trip has no attractive features, the first of my journey impressed me as being unusually eventful. While not of the thrilling type of ye good old days, with nothing of the excitement of that ride from Ghent to Aix, still it had enough of the eventful to redeem it from the usual humdrum monotony of modern travel. In fact, I have no hesitation in saying that it quite outclassed my return trip in this respect.

And now I must apologize for the impropriety of which I am guilty in listening to the conversation of my fellow passengers, and above all in writing extracts from it. I also desire to thank them for the very appreciable part they played in relieving the journey of much of its accustomed monotony.

dancing exceedingly, and a great many compliments were paid the orchestra.

After the sixth dance number, games were introduced, but dancing proving more popular, it was continued instead, and the chocolates intended as prizes for the games, were distributed among the dancers.

After the nineteenth dance, "Home Sweet Home," was sung and then followed the McGill Yell. Then the puzzle was solved. Afterwards, the president, Miss Ida Rosenberg, led in cheers for the hostess of the evening, Miss Maud Gurman, and loud and appreciative cheers were given the members of the orchestra, who had helped make this occasion a great event in the history of the Welcome Club.

The entertainment closed with the Club Yell, and "God Save the King." Everyone declared the evening to have been an extremely enjoyable one, and thanks are due the McGill students for contributing so largely to the general festivity.

The Welcome Club extends a hearty welcome to all McGill students to attend their weekly meetings on Saturdays, at 8 p.m.

The Royal Military College of Canada.

THERE are few national institutions of more value and interest to the country than the Royal Military College of Canada. Notwithstanding this, its object and the work it is accomplishing are not sufficiently understood by the general public.

The College is a Government Institution, designed primarily for the purpose of giving instructions in all branches of military science to Cadets and Officers of the Canadian Militia. In fact, it corresponds to Woolwich and Sandhurst.

The Commandant and military instructors are all officers on the active list of the Imperial army, lent for the purpose, and there is in addition a complete staff of professors for the civil subjects which form such an important part of the College course. Medical attendance is also provided.

Whilst the College is organized on a strictly military basis the cadets receive a practical and scientific training in subjects essential to a sound modern education.

The course includes a thorough grounding in Mathematics, Civil Engineering, Surveying, Physics, Chemistry, French and English.

The strict discipline maintained at the College is one of the most valuable features of the course, and in addition, the constant practice of gymnastics, drills and outdoor exercises of all kinds, ensure health and excellent physical condition.

Commissions in all branches of the Imperial service and Canadian Permanent Force are offered annually. The diploma of graduation is considered by the authorities conducting the examination for Dominion Land Surveyor to be equivalent to a university degree, and the Regulations of the Law Society of Ontario, if obtained, the same exemptions as a B.A. degree.

The length of the course is three years in three terms of 12 months each.

The total cost of the course, including board, uniform, instructional material, and all extras is about $800. The annual competitive examination for admission to the College, takes place in May of each year, at the headquarters of the several military districts.

For full particulars regarding this examination and for any other information, application should be made to the secretary of the Militia Council, Ottawa, Ont., or to the Commandant, Royal Military College, Kingston, Ont.

Dr. McCann: "There is nothing wrong with the game; it is the associations."

Mr. Stevenson: "I am not saying anything about the game."

Dr. Wade: "I once shocked a good Presbyterian here by saying they should have billiards and pool in the basement of the church. He said 'If they do that I will leave the church.' (Laughter). ### CORRESPONDENCE

The Daily is not responsible for the sentiments of letters published in the correspondence columns. Signed communications from graduates, undergraduates and members of the faculties will be placed in print if they are not of too great length.

Correspondents are requested to observe the unwritten law of the newspaper office—that they write upon
ONE side of the paper ONLY.

No communications will be admitted to this column without the name of the writer being attached for PUB-LICATION.

Montreal, Jan. 6, 1918.

To the Editor, McGill Daily:

Dear Sir—I trust you will be able to spare a small portion of your valuable space, in which to enable me to make a few statements, which, it is the earnest wish of myself, and that of the committee in charge of the Skating Parties, will be read and observed by the student body as a whole.

In the first place, the series of Skating Parties to be given under the auspices of the Students' Council and Union House Committee, is primarily to popularize the Campus
Rink, and if possible, make it a centre of social life about the college
during the winter.

Secondly, they are given with the idea of stimulating the waning social life at the college, to some extent. With this end in view it was thought that the addition of an informal dance, after the skating party,
would add greatly to their success.

That these social functions are the height of informality must be borne in mind by all, for on that depends, to a great extent, their success. It is to impress this fact on as many as possible that I write this letter.

There are those who may not care to skate, and will arrive only in time for the dance, attired in semi-evening dress. On the other hand, there are those who will both skate and dance and will dress warmly and plainly for the skating, and consequently,
will feel very ill at ease amongst the more formally dressed on the dancing floor. It is just this that we wish to overcome. So it is that we ask the hearty co-operation of the students, both of the R.V.C. and men students in bearing in mind the degree of informality with which these gatherings can only be carried on.

I sincerely hope that no one will take offence at any of the above remarks, as they are meant only in the best interests of the undertaking, and to have as great a degree of "at-homeness" so to speak, prevail
throughout the series as is possible.
In response to numerous questions
I have received, I wish to state that the non-members of the University will be allowed to attend, provided that they are vouched for either by a member of the Students' Society or a member of the Royal Victoria Undergraduate Society.

Thanking you again for your valuable space, and asking that all do as much as lies in their power to make these social evenings a success, I am,
Sincerely yours,
HARRY H. PITTS,
President of the Students' Council.

WHAT THE WOMEN OF FRANCE ARE DOING.

Maude Radford Warren says:
"In a sense, every woman in France is a nurse and a mother to the soldiers. In Paris the Gare du Nord is the railway station to which the French soldiers come on their furloughs, and from which they pass
back to the front. Early in the war, Madame Courcol, a brilliant and charming Parisienne, who was doing canteen work in the Gare du Nord, realized that the Gare had no place
where the soldiers could really rest.
"Figure it, Madame!" she exclaimed,
"her great brown eyes flashing; 'these poor boys enter Paris at all hours of the day and night, some of them having to wait several hours in the meantime with no place to go. And so I talked and begged. The railroad authorities gave me a large basement room here in the Gare, and my friends did the rest. Seventy-five beds, Madame, and it is rare, indeed, that one is vacant, and only too often the men are sleeping on the table. My enterprise lives from hand to mouth,
from day to day.'"

"And who, standing in that dim room, looking at the sleeping men, would not be glad to give? There they lie, those blue figures, with their pale, worn faces, their great packs beside them, the heroes who are saving France—and us. Such weary, brave faces, such sudden smiles when they awake! And Madame Courcol moves among them, dressed in white; handsome, vigorous, motherly; she puts a hand on this man's shoulder; pats the cheeks of that one, sweeps them smilingly wherever she wants them to go—and they adore her. When the long, long train steams out slowly,
taking the men back to the front,
they lean out of the windows and cheer and wave, brave fellows that they are! There are none of their wives or mothers or sweethearts on the platform; that would be too hard to be borne. There are a few American girls from the American Fund for French Wounded, with good-by gifts of comfort-bags; and there is Madame Courcol. Many and many a homesick boy, who can only get to Paris on leave, not to his own far province, carries away the memory of her as the best thing he can take back to the front. Many a man watches that white figure on the platform until it is only a little white
dot. As long as any soldier can possibly see her Madame Courcol waves and smiles. When the train is out of sight, she weeps."—Woman's Home
